

ParentingTeensOnline.com Releases March Issue Tackling Tough Subjects—Teen Sexuality and Depression

Robbinsville, NJ, February 20, 2007/ ParentingTeensOnline, a monthly online magazine for the parents of teenagers, has released its March issue.

ParentingTeensOnline delves into “Hooking Up” (having casual sex with friends) in this month’s cover story. According to the Guttmacher Institute, 46% of 15-to-19-year olds have had sex at least once. By 15, thirteen percent (13%) of teens have had intercourse, but by the time they reach 19, seventy percent (70%) of teens have gone all the way. What’s even more upsetting is the attitude with which kids are experimenting. In this article, experts offer practical guidelines to parents on acknowledging their teen’s sexuality and making sure they will stay safe, physically and emotionally.

ParentingTeensOnline’s March feature articles include:

- Hooking Up – A look into teen sexuality.
- Not Necessarily the Blues – Experts give the signs of teen depression and how parents can handle it.
- The Gap Year – Not every high school senior is ready for college. But there are plenty of other options.
- Baby Sitting for Beginners – Is your teen ready?
- Teens Who Give Back – Teens aren’t all self-centered--plenty of them volunteer. How to get your teen involved.

In our “Monthly Sections”:

- “Parenting on the Run” – teens and grandparents
- “Talking to Parents and Teens” – the war over the bedroom
- “Video Reviews” — the latest video game systems
- “Editor's Tidbits”
 - Effect of Tanning
 - Teens and Media Hype
 - Warning: Pharm Parties
 - Driving & ADHD
- “Quiz” - Cyberbullying
